Long Beach

Playa Larga is an extensive 4 km long sandy area, famous among other things for being the scene of the first defeat of North American imperialism in Latin America, in April 1961.

According to specialists, Playa Larga is the typical image of the Cuban Caribbean: calm and clean waters, white sand, palm trees and the exotic plant mantle that covers the surrounding areas.

However, some elements give this beach its own identity: the Laguna de las Salinas, where the birds take refuge from the harsh winter, and a fantastic coral reef that surrounds the bay and is distinguished from the others by the presence of the huge shark lady who swims in its waters. It is not dangerous, and you can touch it if you wish.

You will have no trouble finding accommodation, many houses are offered to accommodate guests in their rooms, and you will also find a small hotel for a reasonable price if you want more privacy.
